WILLIAM PENN, PHILOSOPHER.

William Penn was an Englishman before he came to America and founded Pennsylvania. An English publication has just reprinted some of his pretty sayings. These are samples: "They have a right to censure, that have a heart to help: The rest is cruelty, not injustice."

"'Tis no sin to be tempted, but to be overcome."

"A reasonable opinion must ever be in danger, where reason is not judge." "A miser in some sense may be compared to Pharach's lean kine, for all that he has does him no good." "When the poor Ildians hear us call brethren servants? We call our dogs servants, but never man."

Miss Helen Gould has discharged her private secretary, says the New York Telegraph. The young woman who was hired to attend to Miss Gould's correspondence seemed to think that her one mission was to exploit Miss Gould. to act as her press agent, in fact, when is generally known that the one thing Miss Gould least desires is publicity and notoriety. Miss Gould's private secretary had at one time been a newspaper woman, and she never got over her instincts to get a good story into print. She knew that Miss Gould was good "copy," and that distinguished member of New York society could not go visiting a friend or donate a million to some college without having one of our families by the name of ser- her private secretary send a long acvants they may cry out, What, call count of it to some of her former newspaper chiefs.
